Women, Women, Women!

New York Sun.
Miss Edith Campbelle, a candidate for the board of education in Cincinnati, is circulating a card on which is printed:

"Nine-tenths of our teachers are women."

"One-half of our parents are women."

"One-half of our children will be women."

Miss Campbelle is too cautious in her third statement. In some communities the female children outnumber the males, and the tendency is that way in the most populous and civilized States. As to one-half of our parents being women, ought not the "better half" to be considered in any calculation? If so Miss Campbelle's claims to election would be still further embraced.

Gowns and the Courts.

Quarrels between dressmakers and patrons concerning the fit of a gown are frequent, we suppose but it is only in New York that the custom of having the dress tried on in court for decision by a judge, who in this respect usually is no judge, prevails. Every few months we read of such adjudications in the great city, and there is a justifiable suspicion that the New York judges welcome this sartorial break into their routine. Of course, they would not say in such cases or require the interesting demonstration if it were of a character that no sedate, learned and married jurist should look upon, and we have not yet noted a "clear-the-court" order, but a case is scheduled which to our provincial mind presents many dangers to proper judicial procedure and threatens a peril to the judiciary which is far worse than the recall.

Mrs. Leslie Carter, the actress, has been sued for payment for $3,000 worth of artistic draperies, including a $400 flesh-pink "nightie," and the astonishing statement is made in a metropolitan paper that she has been ordered to try on the garments in court. Can it be possible that the tribunal of justice is to be desecrated by such an exhibition?

What of the judge who is to sit in judgement upon a flesh-pink "nightie"? Truly, he will have a parlous hour when he goes home that evening. Indeed, this job that he is going to undertake is no man's work. Such cases should go before a feminine judge, or the defendant should be compelled to accept the verdict of a jury made up of peeresses. Justice is blind, but a judge can see, and if the judge be a mere man, he should be saved from the spectacle of the fiery-headed actress clad in the affair mentioned. A costume court, even a woman judge and feminine officers, is one of the needs of the day in New York.

Dr. Wiley Commends Cotton Oil

For over quarter of a century Dr. Wiley, the famous government expert, has conducted an active campaign for pure food in the interest of public health. His advocacy in a recent speech of the use of Cotton Oil as a food is, therefore, especially significant; it simply emphasizes the wholesomeness of Cotton Oil, the use of which he so strongly recommends. Cottonseed oil is endorsed by physicians generally, because of its purity and wholesomeness. It has been the leader in Cotton Oil products for over twenty-five years.

China Plant for Charlotte.

In the presence of a number of distinguished citizens and prominent business men of the city, Mr. Arthur S. Watts of the bureau of mines of the United States government, spoke informally in the business office of the Greater Charlotte Club last night. For some time there has been discussion among business men of the Queen City, relative to the establishment of a manufacturing plant in Charlotte for the turning out of a high grade of chinaware, and the visit of Mr. Watts was apropos of this question. The securing of the services of Mr. Watts is directly attributable to the efforts of Mr. Oscar Thies, who met the government expert in the western part of the State during the present summer, while he was examining the kaolin deposits of North Carolina. Last night's meeting was without form, Mr. Watts giving the assembled members the benefit of his extensive knowledge of the china manufacturing business, and answering such questions as were asked him.

"I feel safe in saying," said Mr. Watts, "that no where in the United States is there produced such a fine quality of kaolin as may be secured in the western section of North Carolina. Texas ranks next in its superlative production of this product mineral, but I feel safe in saying that the North Carolina kaolin is unsurpassed. In Dresden Germany, and Copenhagen, Denmark, the kaolin used in the finest production of the finest quality of china is not of better quality than may be found in this State."

"I should advise that if a manufacturing plant be established in Charlotte, it should confine its products entirely to the highest and more expensive grades of chinaware. There is not a manufacturer of high-priced china in the United States today, who is not making money from his plant. Another reason that this plan should be pursued is that there are extremely few manufacturers of the strictly high-grade articles of chinaware in this country. The price of a piece of china is largely determined by its name--Charlotte Observer.

Chased by a Waterspout.

An American steamer had the rare experience, while off the coast of Guatemala, of being pursued by a waterspout, which suddenly appeared near the ship. In the midst of the consternation the captain ordered his course reversed and soon the steamer was driving along with the waterspout in pursuit.

Its crest was hidden in a dark mass of cloud, its base seeming to operate like an immense revolving colander, while the entire external periphery formed a cushion of foam, over which sea-birds screamed, occasionally seizing upon the dead fish that came within reach.

The spout formed a sort of spiral cylinder, streaked with opaque parallel lines through its whole length.

These lines were evidently ascending columns of water, for afterward, when the upper and lower sections became detached the accumulated volume of water overhead immediately began its descent within the body of the spout, as though it had been the valve of a nimmense syringe.

The water thus released must have been equal to several tons, as it was solid and almost black, and returned to the sea with a loud roar, all the other parts of the aerial structure gradually disappearing.

Perhaps the most singular feature of all was the serpentine form assumed by the section nearest the cloud, which moved off at first almost horizontally, and then turned upon itself in a perfect coil, so that for a moment, when the end of the aqueous rope switched a section, it resembled a ball of ink.

When the spout was in its finest stage, lightning several times flew through the penumbra in zigzag courses, making a spectacle not only terrible but sublime and beautiful as well.
